

On behalf of the United Postmasters and Managers of America (UPMA), I want to extend my sincere gratitude to Postmaster General Louis DeJoy for his leadership and commitment to the United States Postal Service. Throughout his tenure, UPMA has maintained a productive and open working relationship with Postmaster General DeJoy, and we appreciate his willingness to engage with our organization on critical issues impacting postal operations and employees.

We especially thank him for his strong support of UPMA, demonstrated by his attendance at every UPMA Legislative Summit and every UPMA National Convention during his tenure. His willingness to meet with our members, listen to their concerns, and discuss the future of the Postal Service has been invaluable. UPMA proudly worked alongside Postmaster General DeJoy to ensure mail service continued during the COVID-19 pandemic, to help pass landmark legislation like the Postal Service Reform Act, and to address the longstanding business challenges the organization must continue to navigate.

As he prepares to depart, we wish him the very best in his future endeavors and appreciate his efforts in leading the Postal Service through a challenging and transformative period. We look forward to working with President Trump, the Board of Governors, and Congress as new leadership at the Postal Service engages in efforts to strengthen the organization for the benefit of postmasters, managers, and the communities we serve.”

Sincerely,

Anthony Leonardi

National President UPMA
